

Business Continuity Planning

A business continuity plan should provide your organization with the information and procedures to manage the operations during a major disruption.

More frequently clients, regulatory bodies and insurance providers are asking firms to show or demonstrate the effectiveness of their plans.

Our packages enable even the smallest firms understand functional risks and where necessary create plans that will be effective in a crisis.

Our incremental approach enables our clients to undertake a process of development that is manageable and cost effective.

Our independence will produce a practical and pragmatic plan that will be developed with our client's staff to ensure on going Business Continuity Management.

Regulatory views

Functional Risk Control ...is the ability to understand the business critical areas of operation and have in place a set of plans and alternative logistics to take control and minimise the effect of failure.

Levels of control within a crisis.

“...Business Continuity management helps avoid chaos by concentrating on everything that is needed to continue the key processes, whatever the catastrophe” DTi

“ Business continuity planning is an essential part of firms’ management of operational risk and as such, should already be a focus for regulatory attention. The events of 9/11 have heightened awareness of the importance of BCM generally and the scope for widespread disruption involving firms, infrastructure and hence the financial system as a whole” FSA
